

"I #MakethePACT because I believe these stories need to be heard."
- Colin, Rowan University

Make the PACT

www.pact5.org

I am aware that sexual assault can happen to anyone at any time.

I believe we can end sexual assault through education.

I will always be sure of genuine consent before any sexual activity.

I will take action if I see a situation that could lead to sexual assault.

I commit to learning more and promoting the PACT.

What can I do to make a difference?

1

Watch the documentaries at www.pact5.org.

Each documentary was created by students for students & explores different issues around sexual assault. In order to end the problem, we have to understand how this crime impacts our campus communities. Bystanders play an important role in prevention.

2

Be an active bystander.

If you see a situation that is inappropriate, uncomfortable, or threatening to another person, safely intervene by speaking up, offering resources, or getting help.

3

Invite friends to join the conversation.

Grab some popcorn & a couple of your friends & watch the documentaries together. Suggest to an RA or professor that he/she incorporate the documentaries into activities they're doing on campus. It's great that you're involved, now get others involved, too.

4

Promote PACT5 online.

@ PACT5 #MAKETHEPACT

Like & follow PACT5 on Facebook & Twitter. Take a picture of why you made the PACT & share it with us & your friends.

5

Get creative!

Are you in a student group? Encourage your group to make the PACT as an organization. Hold a fundraiser or awareness event & incorporate the PACT into your activities. Add the PACT5 logo to your profile picture or e-mail signature. And keep talking! Have conversations about consent, bystander intervention, & campus culture.

Show respect to your friends, partners, and campus community - and expect respect in return.